Hand evaluation is often difficult. The auction will usually be your best gauge to understand the importance of your honor cards and your distribution. This hand offers a good example.

*Majors or minors

BIDDING: There are many conventions to use over the opponents' opening 1NT. This North-South partnership uses a double to show either the majors or the minors. After East redoubled to suggest his side had the balance of power, South ran to 2C hoping North held the minor suits. But, North followed with 2H showing the majors so South took a preference to 2S. He was expecting the opponents to double but instead heard his partner raise. South looked at this weak hand and started to pass but stopped to reflect on the auction. After hearing the 1NT opening and East showing strength, North still was inviting game. South knew that his partner must hold a really strong major two-suiter and quickly realized the importance of the king-queen of hearts. He accepted the invitation but was very nervous and eager to see the dummy.

PLAY: West won the two minor suit aces and continued with another diamond. South ruffed this in dummy and played a heart to his hand. He then lead a spade to dummy's king followed by another heart to his hand. A second spade toward dummy was won by West. He forced dummy to ruff another minor suit card after which South drew the last trump and made his contract.

This hand was well bid by North. He knew the dangers in missing a vulnerable game at this form of scoring. At the other table, North-South stopped in 3S making four and South was heard to say: "But, I only had five points".

This was an exciting hand. Note it takes a heart opening lead to defeat 3NT by East-West.

In a pairs event overtricks are very important. Here is a hand where the auction gave declarer the information he needed to take the maximum number of tricks.

BIDDING: After North's raise, South made a help-suit game try in clubs. West had a nice hand but after a few moments he realized his partner must be broke so he passed with a sigh. North bid 3D which denied help in clubs but showed a good raise with a diamond honor. This was enough to encourage South to bid game.

PLAY: West led the ace of hearts but after spotting the heart queen in dummy, shifted to the queen of spades. Declarer saw he could ruff his two low clubs in dummy so his only other possible loser was a diamond. Reflecting on the auction, declarer knew it was almost certain West held the diamond king and the heart king so a squeeze was possible to develop a 12th trick. It was a simple matter to draw trumps and ruff the two small clubs. He then played the rest of the trumps and West was doomed. On the last trump West had to discard from diamond K and club KJ while behind him dummy held the heartQ and diamondA8. His only hope was to discard a diamond and hope his partner held the queen but it wasn't to be. Declarer discarded his now worthless heart queen and took the last two diamond tricks.

Surprisingly, in a local game only five of twelve N-S pairs found this simple squeeze. Declarer merely needed to visualize the red suit holding of West and play all of his trumps.

You need good bidding tools to reach the close games. If you're just guessing, you need to be lucky.

*Drury

BIDDING: North passed a near opening strength hand. After South opened 1S, North's first impulse was to leap to game. However, it was possible that South had opened light in third seat so North used the Drury convention to ask about South's hand. Drury is used by a passed-hand in response to a major suit opener. The 2S response showed an opening hand but one with no extra values. That was enough for North and game was quickly reached.

PLAY: This was a good game. Declarer needed either the heart king in the West hand or the club ace in the East hand. A diamond was led and South ended up with ten tricks losing one heart, one diamond, and one club.

It's true that most N-S pairs reached this game but what if South had opened light, say without the club king? Would you have stopped short of game with the North hand or bid four and hoped for the best?

#4

It's nice when the opponents pass allowing you to find your best contract but much of the time, they get in your way. This often means scrambling for your tricks; take a look at this one.

	C A973

BIDDING: South's hand was too strong to merely overcall so he started with a takeout double. West made a preemptive raise to the three-level and South doubled again to show a very good hand. With no defense, North bid his five-card diamond suit. South finally was able to show his spade suit and North passed hoping the queen and jack of spades would be enough support.

PLAY: West led a heart and South counted five potential losers: one heart, one diamond, and three clubs. A review of the auction told declarer both minor suit kings were probably in the East hand so at least the diamond finesse should work. He also wanted to take advantage of dummy's heart ten so he won the heart queen with the ace and returned the jack. East won the king and switched to a trump. Declarer won this in dummy and played a second trump to get the bad news about the spade suit. Next he played the ten of hearts discarding a club and then took the winning diamond finesse. He now had ten tricks: five spades, two hearts, two diamonds, and one club.

It may appear the contract can be defeated with an opening club lead, but careful play will still bring home ten tricks. Declarer should lose only one heart, one club, and a club ruff. Also note that declarer has an easy nine tricks in 3NT.
