Perhaps the most important part of good defense is partnership trust. When your partner doesn't want you to continue a suit, he probably has a good reason.

BIDDING: South's jump to game closed the auction.

PLAY: West led the ace of spades and East discouraged with the deuce. Looking at dummy, West suspected his partner was not asking for a club shift so West led the nine of diamonds. East won the ace and returned a low spade. West won and a second diamond allowed East to ruff for the setting trick.

At most tables West ignored the deuce of spades at trick one and continued with the king. Defense is difficult but one way to simplify it is to carefully watch and understand each card your partner plays.

It's always fun to execute a squeeze and this hand was particularly sweet. I had squeezed my good friend the day before and as he sat down he smiled and mentioned that hand. We had a routine hand and then we took out these cards.

BIDDING: In third seat East made a bold heart preempt. I was South and overcalled in diamonds hoping we weren't missing 3NT. My partner raised me to game.

PLAY: West led the 7 of hearts and East cashed the first two tricks. He continued with a third round and I ruffed high as West discarded the 8 of spades. Since East held the top three heart cards it was likely that most if not all of the missing honors were in the West hand. This was a very easy hand to play. I simply cashed the ace of spades followed by six rounds of diamonds. My friend who was squeezed yesterday was in the West chair and when I played the last diamond this was the ending:

	♣AK96
♠K
♣QJ8
	♠J ♦6 ♣74

Poor West could not keep the king of spades and three clubs and had to concede. A spade lead at trick one or after winning the first heart would have broken up the squeeze. West smiled as he left but I'm not sure he meant it.

Most duplicate players know what a "fix" is. This describes receiving a bad result for doing nothing wrong. The usual cause is simply playing the hand against the wrong players.

BIDDING: In third seat East made a heart preempt and South bid 3NT. His heart stopper was “iffy” but he felt this bid best described his hand.

PLAY: West led the 4 of hearts won with dummy’s ace. Declarer was confident that East would not preempt with such a good heart suit and the ace of spades so the contract seemed safe. He cashed the top two diamonds followed by a third one when East discarded a heart. It was now a simple matter to knock out the ace of spades and claim eleven tricks.

What does this have to do with a fix? I was East and in a local game only one other N/S pair reached 3NT. I was rewarded with ½ matchpoint for making what seemed like a normal bid.

Bridge players love to bid slams but some lack the tools that allow them to get to the optimum contract. Here is a well bid grand slam.

*Game forcing

BIDDING: North was surprised and delighted when his partner made a game-forcing diamond bid. North was immediately thinking slam, perhaps even a grand slam. Concerned about two losing hearts, North simply raised diamonds. South cooperated by cue bidding hearts and North jumped to 4NT to ask about keycards (4 aces + king of diamonds). South admitted to three keycards and North continued with 5NT to ask about kings. South showed the king of clubs and North could not contain himself and leaped to the grand slam in notrump.

PLAY: West led a spade and declarer quickly claimed thirteen tricks. Most pairs stopped in a small slam so this N/S pair earned a good result for their solid bidding. Their 2/1 bidding system allowed them to make forcing bids without having to jump and lose valuable bidding space.

#53 - TIMING IS EVERYTHING

All Pass

Dbl

West's 2♠ (showing pushed N-S into the what happened in you would have done

West led the ♠K, won tricks it would be and as the trump suit was so weak it was apparent that some ruffing would be required. One line that would clearly not work would be to get the enemy trumps out of the way first, that would leave Declarer a trick short (scoring only three trump tricks). So Declarer cashed the ♥A at Trick 2, and then, leaving three enemy trumps at large, he played on the side-suits. His general plan was to let the opponents take their trumps whenever they wished, but that was all they would get. He started with Dummy's high Clubs, but West ruffed the third round and played another Spade. Dummy ruffed, East over-ruffed and cashed her high Heart, leaving Declarer with just 9 tricks.

Declarer needed to time the play better if he was to score 10 tricks. At Trick 2 he must duck a trump! Now, he wins the Diamond return, plays the Ace of trumps and (leaving one enemy trump at large) goes about his business of cashing winners and cross-ruffing. Altogether Declarer has 11 potential tricks via the ♥A, four ruffs and six side-suit winners, but that enemy trump will rub out one of those tricks and reduce the total to 10. Making 4♥, thanks to careful timing.

2♠ Dbl Pass 4♥

Pass Pass Dbl All Pass

If the N-S hands look familiar, that's because they were featured in last week's Bridge Bite. But the E-W hands have been changed, and East, who now has four trumps, could not resist doubling 4♥. That was not a wise move, as we are about to see.

Last week, in the absence of a Double, Declarer played for 3-2 trumps, and as that turned out to be the case, 10 tricks could be made by winning the Spade lead, and ducking a round of trumps at Trick 2. Declarer could win the return, draw just one more round of trumps and, leaving one trump at large, could cash winners and cross-ruff his way to 10 tricks.

But this week Declarer has to make 10 tricks after East has doubled. Now it seems likely that East has 4 trumps and ducking a trump at Trick 2 will not work. East wins and returns a trump, and will later get in (with a Spade over-ruff or a Club ruff), draw another round of trumps and leave Declarer a trick short. So, guided by the Double, Declarer does not duck a trump at Trick 2. Instead, she cashes the ♥A and goes for three Diamond ruffs in her hand (confident that West is now out of trumps and cannot over-ruff). The play goes: ♠A; ♥A; ♦A; Diamond ruff; ♣A; Diamond ruff; ♣K; ♣Q; Diamond ruff. That's 9 tricks and when the ♣J is played next, there will be a 10th trick, one way or another.

No doubt East's Double seemed like a good idea at the time, but in fact it only served to give Declarer a road map to the winning line of play, by alerting him to the likely 4-1 trump split.

#55 - THAT SINKING FEELING

The auction has not been recorded for posterity, but we can say that N-S must have bid quite superbly in order to reach the excellent contract of 7♠. "Nicely bid, Partner! A cold grand slam with only 28 combined HCP!" enthused Declarer when Dummy was tabled after the opening lead of the ♦K. Declarer was quite right, the slam was cold, but not the way that he played it. Of course, you can do better. How do you propose to make 13 tricks?

Declarer didn't bother to count his tricks, perhaps feeling that it would have been rather unsporting to waste time when he had so many trumps and Club winners. At Trick 2, he played a trump to Dummy's Ace and, when East showed out, Declarer paused for thought (one trick too late!). It was then that he got that awful sinking feeling in the pit of his stomach, realizing that he could no longer get two ruffs in Dummy because of the shortage of entries back to his hand. Getting only one ruff would leave him a trick short, so he tried to set up the Clubs, but that lifeline failed him when the suit was 4-1. Down one!

"Rotten luck", sympathized North, in soothing tones. "If Spades or Clubs had broken reasonably you would have made your slam". What North politely refrained from saying was "Why on earth didn't you win the opening Diamond lead, cash the Hearts (pitching Diamonds), ruff a Diamond high, get back to hand with a trump, ruff a Heart high, cross back with another trump, and draw the last trump?"

N-S reached their Spade game one baby step at a time and West led the ♥K. Seeing the danger of Heart ruffs in Dummy, East overtook with his Ace and smartly shifted to a trump. That was sensible defense, now what would be sensible Declarer play?

It may seem routine to finesse the Spade, but that would be fatal. West wins his King and returns another trump. Oops! Now Declarer has only one Heart ruff in Dummy and is down one! The correct play is easy enough if Declarer counts his tricks. He has three side-suit winners, and if he can get two Heart ruffs in Dummy, then he can make do with just five trump tricks in his own hand. Ten easy tricks, but only if Declarer makes certain of both ruffs by hopping up with the ♠A at Trick 2. The full line of play is: ♥A; ♠A; Heart ruff; ♦A; Diamond ruff; Heart ruff; Diamond ruff; then play on trumps.

As Declarer was engineering those Heart ruffs he did well to return to hand with Diamond ruffs. If he had attempted to use the ♣A and ♣K as his entries then he'd have got a nasty shock when West ruffed the second Club for down one.

How about an opening trump lead? Does that set 4♠? Actually, no! Declarer wins and plays a Heart. If East wins that trick he cannot play another trump, and Dummy gets the two ruffs ... and if West wins he can lead a trump to stop the second ruff, but only at the expense of his natural trump trick. A Club opening lead is no better for the defense because, although the defense is able to arrange a Club ruff, that comes at the expense of their natural Club trick.
